

Introduction to Polymer Processing

Daniele Parisi, UG

In this lecture a brief introduction to the most utilized unit operations in the polymer processing industry will be provided, specifically extrusion, injection and blow molding.

Throughout the lecture, the link between polymer molecular structure, rheology and processing will be emphasized.

Understanding how polymeric materials are processed enables tailored molecular design and the development of effective characterization methods and protocols.